RA FALLEN

Dreyg > Dreyg > World Encyclopedia > Dreygsin Colonies > Ra Fallen

Considered the Eldest Colony, the first of the children to rise from the clutches of death on the fields of Neith. Revered as one of the strongest, this colony mostly resides within the biggest territory that they've held since the dawn of their species. They are a harsh elder colony that sticks together, they are social and form strong eternal bonds with each other.

BIOLOGY + APPEARANCE

The Ra Fallen most resemble the mighty Anubis. They are a big-statured race, no matter where they are on the gender, and many sport vibrant golden eyes. They are believed to be the closest to the original Dreyg heritage, and many of the Ra Fallen take it upon themselves to explore the lands and uncover artifacts and scrolls so that they may honour those that came before.

The Elders within this race tower over the rest of their already tall Dreygsin. Most of this race are extremely old, it's very common for them to be easily over 10k+. They were able to hold the Rhakot back from destroying the world all over again. They suffered a fair amount of losses, but the majority of the Ra Fallen are much stronger than the average Rhakot when they were in that maddened state.

Other than being very powerful and larger than the average Dreygsin, the Ra Fallen are very open with each other. Though this happens more in the city, there are known to be many orgies. A popular destination within the city is a beautiful royal garden that is rife with debauchery during times of celebration, victory and also the changing of seasons.

There are many public places that are acceptable for sex where others may not bat an eye or perhaps ask to join in. The Ra Fallen have been alive for so long that sex is like saying hello between friends though there are some that can be monogamous or even stick with one partner. Even an immortal can find their Eternal Soulmate(s).

HISTORY

A grand war brought upon the uprising within the hells ruled by Anuneph. The God of Death wiped out all life upon the world of Dreyg, the original Dreyg were all wiped out with the final battle taking place upon the grand fields of Neith which had been levelled from a sprawling series of castles to nothing.

There this race of Dreyg were brought back to life by Sutek who raised his new flock of children, guiding their broken shattered souls back into bodies. Countless years passed and they became the Dreygsin. The Ra Fallen were two colonies that became one, most knowledge of these early years were lost as things were in a state of disarray.

CULTURE

While their age is great, children are few and far between. Families can end up being quite large. Family units sticking together and living close by. These are a people that have a few villages surrounding one massive city- which is called Abyonis which is run by the Elder Vera. The other two elders are her beloved consorts and advisers, they have been lovers since they gained consciousness in their revived bodies and their bond is unbreakable. They are large statured women that guide their colony together.

Scrollsayer V-Ashia one of the elder consorts runs a small scholarly university within Abyonis where her and her students collect scrolls and books, making a grand library that Dreygsin from all around the world are welcome to visit and study. No book is permitted to leave the grounds, no matter how magical or important they may be. This is a collection of knowledge that rivals all the combined Derveni libraries.

Abyonis is covered in beautiful lush gardens, a slow moving river splits the city in two which is well tended to by royal gardeners that also make sure the fish within the river are well fed which many Ra Fallen fish from, taking only enough to feed their family. It is common for most Dreygsin living within Abyonis to have small gardens in closed off backyard units that they have stone structures around. The gardens can have fruits and vegetables, sometimes just lush flowers for sweet scented perfumes which are sold in street markets.

Many Ra Fallen have visited other realms through use of The Great Dreyg Tree on Arach lands, they are permitted to freely move through their land as one Ra Fallen soldier is worth a dozen Arach soldiers- which is much needed when Rhakot hunting parties sweep their land. Many times regular Ra Fallen adventurers root out Rhakot barbarians from settling in.

RA FALLEN FARMERS

The fields outside of Abyonis are called Kaigro and it stretches through the majority of the Ra Fallen nation. Most of that land is occupied by farming families.

A farmer's job is dangerous, it is most common for a farmer to have served in the Ra army with thousands of years of experience behind their guiding rods. It is common for farmers to wield scythes, some with two.

The Ra Fallen army is very specific in training their soldiers how to be incredibly deadly with the scythes and sickles for they are needed for more than tending the land. Rhakot ferals have been known to creep in and decimate entire swaths of livestock in a single night which is why the most successful farms are run by large families that can watch over their animals in shifts.

Many farmers built large stone structures around their land with an opening at the bottom where they can light a fire, the rock foundation within was sealed with a special eternal oil that when struck it will burn bright and can be seen for miles. Those are only lit in times of EXTREME emergency. A few Rhakot will not be worth lighting the oil as the structure has to be opened up and reoiled which is a grueling task with the oil also being expensive- so rare is it that someone lights it without needing serious help.

The rule is: You see the light, you lend aid. Not helping your neighbour or family could spell doom for your own farm should the dangers be something like a maddened lesser god or an entire Rhakot hunting party.
